My hope for the Future

I look forward to new opportunities and adventures. For the rest of middle school, I hope to continue to grow academically and maybe even be placed in Gifted and Talented classes for other subjects. In high school, I hope to earn extra credits so maybe I could graduate early. I'm also confident that I will be familiarized about my future career: neuroscience. *

Questions

I wonder what life will be like in the future. How will the world look? How will architecture evolve? Will Tv shows that I watch now be a thing of the past? Can cars fly yet? Who is the president? How much has science evolved yet? What are the fashion trends? Is time travel real? Have super sonic jets been invented? Has the voting age been reduced? Have robots replaced humans at certain jobs? Will traveling to outer space be a normal vacation for some? I have so many questions and I can't wait to see what their answers might be.

Myself in 10 Years

In ten years I will be about 21 years old. During this time, I will be a published author and successful business women. I might even be in college for neuroscience. Although, before I go to college, I would like to travel the world for about a year. Maybe, I could take a trip to Italy or France. Hopefully I would have completed a few of my goals. Goal completion is a big part of my future, so I hope to complete at least 3 of my goals. I will achieve this with my excellent parents, good education and my gifted brain!

My Future home

I remember that when I was eight, my family moved to the suburbs in Katy Texas. It was gorgeous and the community was family friendly. If I ever had a family, I would like to move back to the Texan suburbs. Life would be peaceful there, and I could watch my kids grow up in such a wonderful community. As a young single women, I would like to live in a high rise where I live in an apartment on the top then possibly have my own shop on the bottom. Life would be wonderful, I could shop and explore the city, taking in breathtaking sites.
